Leonardo da Vinci in the Royal Collection by Martin Clayton

Head of Prints and Drawings for the Royal Collection Trust at Windsor Castle

Martin recently curated the exhibition of Leonardo drawings, at the National Museum Wales, Cathays Park and thirteen other venues around the UK in 2019, which in total have been seen by more than 1,300,000 people.

Martin is a Yorkshireman by birth. He studied Natural Sciences and History of Art at Christ's College, Cambridge, and credits his interest in Renaissance art to a school trip to the Hermitage Museum in St Petersburg where he was fascinated by the chisel marks on a sculpture. Martin began to work in the Print Room of the Royal Library at Windsor Castle in 1990 and in 2013 he became Head of Prints and Drawings for the Royal Collection Trust. He has curated many exhibitions of drawings and prints in the Royal Collection in the UK and internationally and is a specialist in the drawings of Leonardo da Vinci.
