Art gallery and garden Hauser and Wirth, Bruton, Somerset and Lacock, Wiltshire

Wednesday 20th September

Hauser and Wirth in Somerset is one of an international chain of art galleries housing changing exhibitions and offering an educational service which extends from London to Los Angeles, Hong Kong to Madeira. In the village of Bruton, Somerset it is to be found in a converted farmstead set in a perennial garden by the landscape designer Piet Oudolf. A tour of the exhibition and the garden has been arranged for the Friends of the Museum after which we shall depart for the village of Lacock.

Fans of period dramas will at some time have certainly seen the winding lanes and C18 houses of Lacock which have been much plundered by film makers and TV producers. There are also numerous opportunities for shopping and eating at the many cafes, restaurants and village pubs.

Lacock Abbey houses the Fox Talbot Museum with fascinating visions of the dawn of photography. The house, gardens and museum are free for members of the National Trust. For non-members there is a cost of £17 (£13 excluding the house).
